

GOLF PUTT TRAINING DEVICE

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A training device for putting a golf ball includes a pair of spaced guides.

- 5 The guides are biased toward a retracted position, but can be anchored in an outstretched, extended position using anchors that are mounted between both the proximal ends and the distal ends of the guides. Stakes are connected to each of the anchors. The stakes are inserted into the surface upon which the device is placed and overcome the bias of the guides toward the retracted
- 10 position, thereby maintaining the guides properly aligned in the extended position.